It is said that women are more refined than men at Football Games. They do not barrack and shout as do men, but may have a friendly little argument between themselves

When women go to football,
They don't barrack, they don't shout,
They just settle down upon the mound
And bring their knitting out.

They don't go on like blokes I know
That take on all the mob,
They might whisper to the lass in front,
"Please, shut your ugly gob!"

You know the way some blokes go on.
Struth! Are they one-eyed?
But a woman. Ah! . . . she's diff'rent,
She's quiet and dignified.

You never hear a woman
Tell a player where to go;
She reckons that's the Cap'tain's job,
And blimey! He should know.

If she sees her hero handled
In a way that's most unfair,
She'll relieve her outraged feelings
With a Sotto Voce swear.

Should her home-team be five points down
With but 'time on' to go,
And they grab a mark, two yards in front,
Is she excited? No!

And if the mark be disallowed,
Then loudly blows the siren,
You'd never think to look at her
She's inwardly perspirin'!

But as she staggers homeward,
Thinking Footie's 'up the pole',
There's a righteous wrath that's rising
In her over-blasted soul.

'Tis then she'll wring her hands and cry,
"The dirty, low-down brute!
And as for that d—— umpire—
I'd drown the flamin' coot!"
